Appomattox Farmers Supply Company Is Sold

Mr. R. G. Holt, owner and operator of Appomattox Farmers Supply Company since April 19, 1955, has announced that on June 1, 1972, he sold the company to John W. Payne and S. V. Wilkins, Jr., of Amherst. Mr. Payne will manage the business and plans to continue operations in the same efficient, courteous manner that has through the years been the policy of Mr. Holt.

One of the oldest businesses in Appomattox County, this business was established as a battery factory in 1929 by a stock company out of New York. In 1933, the late Mr. Walter Dresser purchased the business and continued making flashlight batteries until 1948, when he formed the Appomattox Farmers Supply Company, operating the business until the time of his death.

Mr. Holt purchased Appomattox Farmers Supply Company from Mrs. Nettie Dresser Martin in 1955, and has operated the business until the day of the sale on June 1st to Payne and Wilkins. Mr. Holt will assist in the business operation temporarily but plans to devote much of his time to work on his two farms in Appomattox County.

7 Days From Roanoke To Appomattox

Raymond H. "Junior" Eubank of Vinton, Virginia and his 12 year old mare, Daisy, pictured above, are out to see Virginia - or as much of it as is possible - in Eubank's homemade covered wagon. Junior suffers from a number of diseases and has only been given approximately three years to live.

In a homemade covered wagon pulled by a mare named 'Daisy' Raymond H. "Junior" Eubank, 46 years old, left Roanoke on Tuesday, June 6, 1972. Plans for his first stop was Appomattox and on Monday, June 12, 7 days later, he arrived in our town. Eubank said he wanted to see the McLean House "when I won't have to be in a hurry". He tries to travel for 2 days and then rest for 2 days and says he can usually cover 15 miles a day. He wants to ride in his covered wagon the rest of his life, which the doctors say might be 3 or 4 year. He suffers from a long list of ailments such as : polycythemia (the opposite of leukemia), recurrent phlebitis, diabetes, heart disease, bursitis, high blood pressure, emphysema, inactive tuberculiosu, arthritis and gout, In the past three weeks, Junior has found out that he also has lung cancer.

Eubank is accompanied by his cousin, Johnnie Eubank of Hillsville, as the doctors will not let him travel alone. For several years he drove a rundown station wagon but sold it for $30.00 after the doctor took away his driver's license because of the fact that he had several heart attacks while driving interstate highways.

"Junior" is making a bit of money selling American flags for $1.00 each, he gladly accepts any donations people want to give him and he stops along the highways to pick up pop bottles -- "To me, three cents is three cents", he says. He sleeps in the wagon and his cousin sleeps in a sleeping bag.

Eubank says he'll head for any place that has to do with old times. "That's all I am - an old country boy . I don't go for any
